J. H. VIERBUCHEN, Secretary.

The order turning them over to the society was passed, it is declared, in the absence of Robert W. Wells, who has been acting as guardian for the children for several months. Mr. Wells has announced he will take every possible legal step to prevent the carrying out of the order. Immediately following the order of the court, Mr. Wells brought the children to Washington. They are now with relatives of Mr. Wells, and he refuses to divulge their whereabouts. Residents of Tuxedo are said to be up in arms at the action of the court Not only will a liberally signed petition be sent up from Tuxedo, setting forth the present comfortable conditions under which the children are living and the advisability of allowing them to stay, many residents there who knew Gray family and know of the care they have been receiving from Mrs Bettie McKeown, an aunt, will appear in person before the judges of the orphans' court with a plea that the children be left in their own home.

Pathetic Scene in Court.

The scene in the courtroom at Upper Marlboro Tuesday was described as pathetic, friends of the children protesting against the order, several women being in tears. Mrs. McKeown was greatly shocked at the order, it is reported, and the children when notified of the court's action were at a loss to understand the purport of the order.

Louise Gray, the only girl of the family, who is a pupil at the Thompson School in this city, had arranged to enter the home of Mrs. Samuel Shoemaker here, but, hearing that her brothers were to be sent with the St. Vincent de Paul Society, she refused to leave them and is said to have begged that something be done to stay the order of the court. caring for the children, proceeded to Tuxedo from their home in Pennsylvania to take charge as soon as they heard of the tragedy which robbed the children of father and mother.

Active in Raising Fund.

Mr. Wells, who is given credit to large extent for the raising of the fund the unanimous petition of all the relatives concerned, it is explained, and has visit-ed the children once or twice every week to investigate their condition and environ-He declares he always found them bright and happy. When they reached Arbutus, a few miles this side of Baltimore, they were stopped by a county officer, but were permitted to continue their journey. At the house of a colored family not far from Stony Run, the boys said, they were made comfortable Tuesday night. They also were furnished food by the colored family, and yesterday morning again took to the road. Then we saw the State, War and Navy building, White House and Treasury, and we thought it was then time to send a message home.
